To all those who keep repeating that the Santa Ynez Valley is mostly farmers and ranchers, please realize that land mass does not equal population. Just because most of the land is rural doesn't mean that most of the people live on ranches and farms. They don't. The cities and townships have roughly 15,000 people and the area where the ranches and farms are have about 5,000 people in them. The people in the townships and cities live in a lot of apartments, condos and small houses.
